president's message

It started innocently enough when I spotted a used 50-gallon aquarium for sale on the porch of a neighbor down the street from me. I wasn't entirely sure what I'd use it for, but at $20 it seemed too good of an opportunity to pass up. The Fishing Creek Open House was just a couple of weeks away, so when the time came, I decided to go with an open mind. I came home with a couple of interesting Pleurothallis and a Maxillaria. Parkside's Summer Orchid Fest followed just six days later and did not disappoint. I indulged myself with another Pleurothallis and two more Masdevallia. The Little Greenhouse held its open house a month later, and the half-price Masdevallia offer was too much to resist. Four more Masdevallia. Finally to top things off, I picked up two Masdevallia hybrids as end-of-season awards at our September meeting.

I recount this story for two reasons: First, never, ever add up the expenses associated with your orchids. You'll be appalled. After adding 12 plants, a new stand, some decorative Mopani wood, a new T5 light fixture, timer, and now EcoWeb mats (from our speaker this month), my $20 steal of an aquarium shares more characteristics with a confidence scheme where I was the mark. Those sneaky orchids did it to me again. And this time it was cute little miniatures. And I know that I'm not done. There's room for more plants, especially if I find a new home for six Phalaenopsis species seedlings and commit to mounting a few new plants.

The second point is that you shouldn't ever assume that you know where this orchid hobby will lead you. I never thought I'd seriously try growing miniatures. At the monthly show table, I've been known to question why I should be interested in any plant whose flowers I can't even see. And how long (measured in hours) do you think one or these little darlings would last in my

Ray Barkalow is October Speaker

Our speaker this month is Ray Barkalow of First Rays Orchids. First Rays came into existence as the result of a devastating accident in 1994 when a heater and then temperature alarm failure froze Mr. Barkalow's 20-year-old private collection. Using a perhaps unlikely strategy for paying for a new heater and alarm, Ray went into business as an orchid grower, opening First Rays as a fledgling internet business (www.firstrays.com).

Thanks to extensive business travels and an engineer's mindset, Ray originated and developed a semi-hydroponic culture technique for growing orchids to keep his plants happy during his absences. He has 35 years of experience growing orchids, 15 years growing orchids semi-hydroponically, and enjoys sharing his knowledge with orchid societies across the country. He remarks on his Web site, "The best part about the exposure that First Rays Orchids has given me is the ability to communicate with folks from around the world on the fascinating subject of orchids. Sharing the obsession is second only to growing the plants."

Orders placed via his web site by 11 October will be delivered at our meeting. Please enter "MOS pre-order" in the comments section of the on-line order form.

Changes to the MOS Monthly Auction

The monthly orchid auction is a vital part of the MOS spectrum of member services. It gives members the chance to acquire species and hybrids often unavailable commercially yet grown in our local environment. Additionally, it contributes positively to the organization's bottom line. (The annual profits from the auctions are roughly equivalent to 30 annual membership dues.)

However because of its burgeoning popularity, the auction contributes to the meeting running a bit long into the night. In May and June 2009, we started experimenting with ways to decrease the time required to hold the auction. We are continuing the experiment in October by holding a silent auction for excess plants.

- When at least 15 lots are received for auction, the first 10 lots will be sold via our regular interactive auction.
- All lots received after the first 10 will be sold via a silent auction.
- Silent auction lots will be open for bidding until the beginning of the meeting. At that time, bidding will be closed. The winning bidder for each lot will be announced at the end of the meeting.

Please let your board members know if these changes are working to your satisfaction. We treasure your input!

un-air-conditioned environment during the summer. Yet my plants not only made it through the worst of the summer heat but seem to be thriving, putting up one new leaf after another. For the sake of full disclosure, I didn't simply grab up every plant that was the right size. I did my homework and selected only intermediate- and warm-growing species. I'm now convinced that warm-growing Masdevallia do exist. I've also been much more dedicated than before to regular watering and misting. (I really should be growing succulents and cacti based upon my track record.) Of course, adding up the price tag does have the one benefit of providing motivation to succeed.

So buy and grow what you like to grow, but when pitted against 25,000+ species and 100,000+ hybrids, don't think for a moment that your apparently staid hobby doesn't have a few surprises in store for you if you give it half a chance.
